Bill Wolf Professional Genealogist

Bill is one off our newest members. As you can see from his bio included below, he is an enthusiastic genealogist with a desire to help others with their family history.

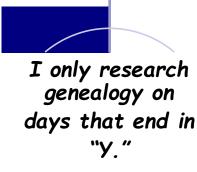

"Originally from Columbus, Ohio, I moved to Prescott in 2002 to be with my future wife. I have been researching family histories for many years, but after retiring this January from work as a Prescott Police Officer, I decided to become a professional genealogist. My goal is to find people who will hire me to research and write their family history. I have a lot to learn and I appreciate the chance to be a member of NAGS where can meet others interested in genealogy and to increase my skill set. Prior to becoming a Prescott Police Officer in 2007, I taught American history at Yavapai College. Earlier I worked at the East European Studies Center at Ohio State University (OSU), in addition to teaching history at universities in Ohio, Illinois and Texas. As for my education, I have a Ph.D. in Russian history from Ohio State University."

For more information, Bill can be contacted at 830-9685 or wkwolf723@hotmail.com.

You know you're a genealogist if you immediately understand these abbreviations:

BC, DC, MC and VR.

Start Today!

As we view the current news and see it filled with wildfires, floods, and storms of all types, it comes to mind the loss incurred and heartbreak of family history being lost.

Many continue to wait for the right time. Some promise themselves that the perfect day to preserve will come or wait for that perfect new product or software to be developed to make preservation easier. Then disaster strikes, and it's too late. All of the 'I-wish-I-would-have' statements are then wasted breath after a catastrophic event.

Begin the journey to a preserved collection of family history materials by doing something today.

Your children may not thank you, but if you preserve the family genealogy your great, great, great, great descendants will remember you as super-great!

WHITHER THE NAGS BOOKS? By Carol Hubert

When the Prescott Valley Public Library (PVPL) notified NAGS last fall that it was closing the Genealogy Room, our big question was, "What do we do with the books?" Our collection there consisted of many years of journals from genealogy societies across the U.S., plus 566 volumes donated and purchased by members over the collection; the LDS Church, Yavapai College Library, net." know!

The NAGS Library Chair, John Thorne, intrepidly took on the challenge (despite a recent hip replacement!). The first step was to transfer the journals to a room at the LDS Family History Center and notify the members to "Come and get 'em!" Any journals not claimed this way were recycled. For step two, John used his well-honed computer skills to compile an elaborate spread sheet of the "freebie" PVPL's list of the books, categorizing how and where each was available on the internet . . . or not. That list was given to libraries that had indicated interest in some of the books--the PPL, the Sharlot Hall Museum Archives, and the West Valley Ge- Many thanks to the NAGS members who hefted Sun City, west of Phoenix). As the books were possible. "deaccessioned" by the PVPL, John transported them to his garage, and the distribution began.

The local libraries got first choice: PPL accepted some twenty books for its reference collection; the Museum Archives took forty-three. Duplicate copies of Yavapai County record books were split between these two libraries. Both also got both general and specialized guides to research. West Valley opted for a whopping 146 books, which Sue Kissel generously transported to them. As a long shot, John contacted the LDS Family History Library in Salt Lake City with a list of books not found in their catalog—and they requested nine, which Nancy Nelson delivered there on a family visit. The remaining approximately 350 books are now "giveaways," about two dozen at a time, at the monthly membership meetings.

In addition to record books, the SH Museum Archives took guite a few other Arizona-related books, plus "how to" genealogy books and even specialized sources like Barbados and Cherokee research. If you don't mind the drive, the West Valley library has the largest genealogical collection in the Phoenix area (they absorbed many books from the state archives), and their catalog is online. Of course, you may find exactly the source you've hoped for as a at a monthly NAGS membership meeting. Who and How Does Your Society Run?

Your Genealogical Society

By Raylene Hiatt Member at Large

Who and how does your society run? You, the membership, run your society.

The Society has a Board of Directors consisting of the four elected officers (President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer), a Member-at-Large and the various committees. The Board meets at the LDS Church on the second Wednesday of the month at 9:00 a. m. for about one hour with a total of about 15 people.

The committees are:

- * Program organizes monthly general membership meeting programs, makes the necessary arrangements and promotes the event through various media.
- * Publicity lets the public know what we are doing with announcements to the newspaper and radio stations.
- Library schedules mentoring and instruction on genealogical topics at various venues and genealogical events within the community.
- Membership—maintains the membership register and sends notices to membership as requested.
- Social Media—maintains the Society's website and any other social media approved by the Board.

- * Hospitality meets and greets members and guests. Provides refreshments as appropriate.
- Newsletter—produces this quarterly newsletter to keep you up-to-date on what is happening within the Society and items of genealogical interest.
- Historian keeps a record of all the past society happenings, i.e. board meeting minutes, financial reports, committee reports, events and publications.
- Death and Dispositions maintains the Society's data base on the cemeteries and of deaths and burials in Yavapai County.
- * AZGAB is the liaison with the Arizona Genealogical Advisory Board, a state-wide organization.
- * Special Projects works on items not covered by one of our committees.
- * LDS Liaison keeps us abreast of the happenings in the Family History Center.

This is a very dedicated group of individuals. More people who volunteer help make the tasks less demanding and requiring less time. Your involvement gives us fresh ideas on programs and activities and you get to see and learn what you would like. If you are interested in any aspect of the organization, please see any of the Board members or email us at the NAGS email address. It's rewarding, educational, and you get to work with some great people while making your organization better.

The next time you see one of these individuals be sure to give them a big thank you and pat on the back.

Those who can, do. Those who can do more, Volunteer.

COMMITTEE SPOTLIGHT

Death & Dispositions Sue Kissel, Chair

The Death and Disposition Committee is a genealogical resource team working to help provide for the identification and preservation of records of both the modern-day and early people who died and are buried in Yavapai County. Records include those who died outside of the county as well as those areas as far north as Flagstaff dating before Yavapai County was split.

In the beginning, dedicated NAGS members like Pat Potters, Raylene Hiatt and Sue Kissel worked to locate and manually transcribe archives from funeral homes, records from Prescott's Citizen's Cemetery and Pioneer Home as well as cemetery records in the Verde Valley and other locations in northern Arizona. Then in partnership with the Sharlot Hall Library and Archives, this initial identification work was computerized and uploaded into the library's database. These early records are now preserved and made available for those searching for ancestors whose trail lead them to Yavapai County, Arizona.

A cemetery is a marble garden not to be taken for granite.

The committee strives to maintain and provide record updates through a regional network of contacts and the funeral and cemetery industries. Sue invites volunteers to assist with this important undertaking.

Please contact Sue through our email asknagsprescottaz@gmail.com. Your help and support is greatly needed for this important committee as Sue also continues to be our liaison with Sharlot Hall Library and Archives as well as our delegate for the Arizona Genealogical Advisory Board. AzGAB is a state-wide, non-profit organization of genealogical societies and other like-minded groups who meet every other month in Mesa. They work to promote genealogy and preserve history through the combined efforts of the individual genealogical societies and the public.

Kudos to Sue for all she does for us.

Watch this "Spot" for articles regarding other great NAGS genealogical committees.

Library of Congress Digital Collections collections. From the dropdown menu at the top of the page, select Photos, Prints or Drawings to search visual content. Then search for topics, places, organizations and even names. You can then filter results by place, date and more. If you find a good match, click the subject heading in the image's catalog listing to see similar items. A few items are for use only in the library, but most are downloadable in several sizes. Check the copyright information to make sure an item is in the public domain before you publish it anywhere.

What Does That Really Mean?

Language of Your Ancestor Can Muddy the Quest

Suggested by Lee Campbell

Delving into the past, examining records and documents is something genealogists love to do. The English language, however, has evolved from words and phrases that may have entirely different meanings depending on the content and the year in which they were used.

After WWII, the abbreviation "Ms." came out of the feminism movement as a title of address for a female whose marital situation need not be disclosed. One title it sought to succeed was "Mrs." In much of the 19th and 20th centuries, "Mrs." Indicated a female that was married. Earlier, however, "Mrs." was a title used exclusively to designate a female in the upper class of society. It carried absolutely no connotation of marital status. In the 1700's you will find 10 and 12 year-old females addressed as "Mrs." By the 1790's, if you were a female and not from the upper class, you would appear as "Miss."

Abbreviations are often misinterpreted. If you have a death certificate or census record that lists places of birth as IA, DK or FR, you might conclude that lowa, Dakota or France was intended. Actually, until Iowa became a state, the only state in the Union beginning with "I" and ending with "A" was Indiana. DK routinely signified "don't know." FR could very well signify the proposed state of Franklin, rather than France.

Franklin, the first trans-Appalachian state proposed for admission into the Union, encompassed much of Tennessee. Many 1880 census reports nativity as FR with parents born in NC and VA and in this case meaning Franklin. Likewise, in 1870 Louisville, KY, you might find the occupation of "grocer" in nearly every few households. No, they were not grocers as we think of them, they were men who sold spirituous liquor.

Another confusing term is "orphan." Of course, we think of one who has lost both parents in death. However, the word was often used to describe an underage person who is an heir to an estate. A child's grandmother could die, leaving an inheritance for her granddaughter. Thus, the court would name the child's father guardian of his own orphan daughter!

Terms of relationship also can be troublesome. In a 1750 will of John Hays of Augusta Co., VA, there is a reference to his nephew, Rebecca. The word "nephew" applied to both males and females and designed a grandchild. In a 17th century will, there is a reference to a "cousin." A "cousin" signified one's nephew or niece.

So it is a good idea to continually look for the intentions in the document or record and ensure you fully understand the meaning of the words contained in it.

GENEALOGY - Life in the past lane!

Cousins Explained

Cousins?

How are we related?

When tracing your family history it's important to understand the various types of cousin relationships. The degree of cousin relationships is based on the most recent direct ancestor that two people have in common.

- First cousins are the people in your family who have two of the same grandparents as you.
- Second cousins have the same greatgrandparents as you, but not the same grandparents.
- Third cousins have in common two great-great-grandparents and their ancestors.

What Does "Once Removed" Mean?

When cousins descend from common ancestors by a different number of generations they are called "removed."

- Once removed means there is a difference of one generation. Your mother's first cousin would be your first cousin, once removed. She is one generation younger than your grandparents and you are two generations younger than your grandparents.
- Twice removed means that there is a twogeneration difference. Your grandmother's first cousin would be your first cousin, twice removed because you are separated by two generations.

What is a Double Cousin?

Just to complicate matters, there are also many cases of double cousins.

This situation usually occurs when two or more siblings from one family marry two or more siblings from another family. The resulting children, grand-children, etc. are double cousins, because they share all four grandparents (or great-grandparents) in common. These types of relationships can be difficult to determine and it is usually easiest to chart them one at a time through one family line and then through the other line.

~IMPORTANT~ Security Measures

It's important to take the time to evaluate your security settings. Never use the same username and password for multiple sites. It's also a good habit to use longer passwords and to change them regularly. Also consider the following:

- * Refrain from giving out the network password.
- Place your router in the middle of your home.
- * Disconnect the router when it's not in long-term use.
- * Use a boring network name. Disable your computer's network sharing.
- Replace your router when it becomes obsolete.

Sources Are Our Roadmaps

Genealogy Roadmaps

As we travel new research paths, we blaze trails to unforeseen sources. Like early explorers, we need to draw a map to document our progress and find our way. This roadmap for negotiating genealogical trails is our Research Sources.

Sources serve a variety of purposes. Sources document our research. Sources tell us where we have been and how to re-trace our steps. Sources can help in further research or resolve conflicting information by making it easier to correlate and analyze sources against each other. Sources support our conclusions and vet our work. Sources provide valuable proof to those who carry on our research. The validity of our research is judged by its sources.

Citing sources is similar to that most of us learned in school and serves us well. For a more formal or academic type of citing, Genealogist Elizabeth Shown Mills has written two books titled Evidence! and Evidence Explained. These books are recommended by the Board of Certification of Genealogists for the academic level. This information is also available on her website EvidenceExplained.com.

Citing research is as easy as recording it as and when you found it. It's a good habit to acquire. Be sure to include these components:

- The name of the record source
- ◆ The page number and publication date
- The volume, catalog, or other identification number
- The location where the source was found
- The date the source was found
- What type of physical source it was such as a headstone, family bible, heirloom or unpublished family record book
- ♦ Who the source belongs to

- Where the source is located
- ♦ Library or archive call number
- Cyber sources should include much the same information as well as the website, the URL and date found

Two types of sources exist. 1). Original information which refers to the provenance or an original record. 2). Derivative information which refers to information that was copied, transcribed, or summarized from an existing source.

Quality of information is assessed. There is Primary and Secondary information. A Primary source is derived from records created at or near the time of an event with those involved in the event such as a birth certificate, marriage certificate, or death certificate. A secondary source is compiled after an event took place with those not involved in the event.

All documents contain information to lead you in your research. No matter where you obtain your information from, it's always important to cite your sources.

The best time to enter source notes is at the same time as you enter the event information. Remember: Document! Document! Document! And no time is better than when you record the information.

If you're in the position of not citing your sources in the past or not being as thorough as you should have been, now is the time to start. Set a goal to review your earlier research a little at a time. Repetition will make it easier and more natural as you move forward.

There is abundant information available both published and on-line with indepth explanations and examples if you wish to pursue this topic more fully.

It's All About Family

Family reunions are about the love and connection we share. It gives us a chance to bond with those living far apart, to meet new family members like babies and spouses, to celebrate specific events and to learn our family heritage.

Some families plan reunions every year or two, while some have been meeting annually for decades. Others may have never organized a formal get-together. It's a great time to plan and organize one for your family. Family reunions are a great way to bond, create family ties and update your relatives history. There is no better time to get family members interested in their ancestry. Your enthusiasm for genealogy just might spark the interest for younger family members to take up the search.

If your family doesn't have a tradition of these gatherings, now may be a good time to start. Traditionally, most reunions happen in the summer when children are out of school and family vacations are planned. If you are just starting it's usually a good idea to give yourself and your helpers 12 to 18 months lead time in order to contact everyone and allow them to set aside the date, and for you, ample time for the event planning and logistics.

In your planning, it's important to make genealogy a big facet of the event striving to make family history interesting and attractive to all ages. Here is a brief outline to get you started and encourage other ideas.

* Divide and Conquer- Get organized and set up a volunteer committee with assignments and set up a direct contact person in each nuclear family for communicating plans and options.

- * Choose a date and location.
- * Track down relatives and send out invitations.
- * Obtain a count of attendees and let them know date, time, place, contact information, costs, travel, lodging and other details.
- * Create a budget and collect money from participants to cover costs or consider a raffle or auction record all expenses and payments.
- * Plan activities for all ages:
 - ⇒ Send out family tree charts for members to fill in and return attending or not
 - ⇒ Print family tree charts for display
 - ⇒ Create a give-away
 - ⇒ Ask members to bring old photos
 - ⇒ Request old family recipes to be sent to you for producing in a family heritage cookbook being sure they identify to whom the recipe belonged to
 - ⇒ Ask for covered dish prepared from an old family recipe
 - ⇒ Play family trivia
 - ⇒ Display a map of where family member's live
 - ⇒ Get DNA samples
 - ⇒ Teach kids old games
 - ⇒ Take a family group photo to commemorate the occasion.
- Keep interest going with reminders and information details regarding event happenings and logistics.
- * Decide on food i.e. potluck, catering, restaurant
- * Relax, Enjoy and Have fun!
- Plan next reunion remembering to ask for an evaluation and ideas for next time.
- Send thank you notes.

July is National Family Reunion Month. Family reunions are fun. Think about planning one. There is lots of help available on family reunions on the internet including planning guides. You'll have a chance to laugh, cry, talk about old times and new, honor ancestors and just enjoy being together.

New Members

Please welcome the following new members to our Genealogical Society.

New Member	Surnames Being Researched
Keli & Mike Hindenach
John Koonce
Lynn Light
Bill Wolf

When you see these new members, be sure to introduce yourself, ask about their surnames and encourage them to participate in the NAGS activities. We welcome everyone to many years of continued membership, fellowship, research and volunteer opportunities within the Society. Be sure to pick up your NAGS lanyard and name tag from Martha Welch, Membership Chairperson, the next time you attend the Membership Meeting.

Genealogical research is a rewarding experience. You will learn amazing facts about your ancestors, geography, and history, but most of all you will learn about yourself.
